Forecast For Northwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Thursday 04 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Rain, especially in the northeast.

This Evening and Tonight:
Cloud moving in from the south in the evening will bring a cloudy night, with rain affecting many parts, likely turning heavy in a few places. Rain may turn to wet snow on high elevations, particularly in the northeast. Minimum temperature 2 deg C (36 deg F).

Friday:
Rain will continue to affect parts of the east and northeast through the day Friday. Some snow over the north Pennines. Elsewhere a few brighter breaks, along with occasional showers. Maximum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Bright with wintry showers in the west Saturday, but snow over the Pennines. Colder with more frequent snow showers on Sunday and Monday, bringing a risk of ice. Bitter winds.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.